Selected BobTalk

This week we're talking about work. We're talkin' about golden parachutes, poison pills, golden handshakes. We're talking about workin' like a dog, work around the clock, workin' 9 to 5; talking about all the workin' stiffs who're workin' for a livin', who live to work, labor intensive, doin' odd jobs, married to their job, them employee of the month hard at work.

You can't say enough about Merle Haggard.

I had a boss so mean once, his time clock punched me.

I'm gonna get outta here and see if I can beat the traffic. You know what it's like when everybody gets off work.

1963	Rockin' Sidney	You Ain't Nothing But Fine
1996	Townes Van Zandt	Nothing
1970	The Velvet Underground	Oh! Sweet Nuthin'

Selected BobTalk

We're gonna be talking about next to nothing, for nothing, nothing doing and all or nothing. We're gonna be talking about nothing to write home about and nothing to shout about. Nothing to sneeze at, good-for-nothings, and nothing going for ya. Much ado about nothing, next to nothing, thinking nothing of it, and having nothing to do with ya.

Always enjoy a song with a story attached. It's like getting a two for one, and he makes a good point. Mind your own business! You don't have to get involved; you don't know that whole story. Before you go jumping in, take a moment. Look at the situation. Ask yourself: Will I really be making this better? I guarantee ya, 9 times outta 10, the answer is nooooo. (about It's Nothing To Me)

Boy, what can you say about that? Just fabulous. (about No Love, No Nothin')

With a song this good, you only need one (about Nothing Takes the Place of You)

Huh-ha, that sounded like me playing harmonica. Short and sweet with a steady beat. (about You Ain't Nothin' But Fine)

Selected BobTalk

I think we all know there's only one way to begin.

Ya know when I heard Herman's Hermits sing it I thought it was just about having a piece of cake, or ridin' on a Ferris wheel. But when I hear Earl-Jean sing it, I know exACTly what she's talkin' about!

Ya know, nobody sings like that anymore. He makes it sound effortless, no matter how difficult it really is. I like the elegance of a guy like Clyde McPhatter; it's like watching Fred Astaire.

You can just tell he's one of those guys raised on Western swing, looking forward to rockabilly. I sure would like to know more about him; if ya know anything, give us a call here at the station. (about Jimmy Ballard)

You know, sometimes I get jealous of you people listening. Some of you are hearing these songs for the first time, and that must be exciting. I remember what it was like when I first heard 'em, and I tell ya even after all these years it's still an amazing record – but that first rush of hearin' it...wow! (about Somethin' Else)

Here's The Silver Fox, back when he still had a little bit of black in his hair. (about Charlie Rich)

A beautiful song of quiet despair...a lot of times the arranger gets ignored, but on a record like this you can't imagine it without his touch. (about Something Cool)

Next up, part two of a two part record. Side one is kind of a straight read. Part two – it's wild! Not surprisingly, the guy performing it is wild too. (There's Something on Your Mind Pt. 2)

1974	Jack Kittel	Psycho
1993	Nirvana	Frances Farmer Will Have Her Revenge on Seattle

Selected BobTalk

I can't imagine Jimi Hendrix writing a song called 'Bipolar Disorder.'

A lot of people are unfamiliar with the way that Annie and other vocal lead singers would take jazz solos and put words to them; well this is one of the most famous ones.

Walter basically reinvented the harmonica. When he was growing up, he was obsessed with the Louis Jordan records, and would practice playing Louis' saxophone solos on his harmonica.

The Thin Man from West Plains (about Porter Wagoner)

Here's a wild record with a surprising person at the helm. (about It's Fun To Be Living In The Crazy House)

Here's a man that some call the William Faulkner of jazz. Now I've got to tell you, I've heard this guy play since the 60s, and I've never heard anybody call him the William Faulkner of jazz. But there it is in a book. I mean, somebody just wrote that; I can't imagine anyone calling him the William Faulkner of jazz! I mean that would be like calling Garnet Mimms the Gabriel Garcia Marquez of soul music. It's just not done. I'm getting excited over nothin', let me just play the record. By the way, I consider William Faulkner to be the Mose Allison of literature. Here they are, together again, Mose Allison and William Faulkner, singing the Percy Mayfield song 'Lost Mind.'

The third in our trilogy of demented country songs (about Psycho)

Few things go together as well as country & western music and crazy people.

Selected BobTalk

We're gonna be looking at officers and fuzz, bulls and coppers, private eyes, private investigators, police and private detectives, deputies and constables, lawmen, marshals, and meter maids, the law, and the man. But of course that's just one side of the law. We're also gonna turn the Theme Time spotlight on bandits and buccaneers, burglars and cheats, conmen and crooks, looters and marauders, something and pickpockets, stickup men, swindlers, thieves, thugs, gangsters, gunmen and hijackers. Bruisers and Godfathers, Mafioso and mobsters. I'm sure we have a lot of listeners on both sides-

Nat Cole Trio – Call The Police “What made their sound so swingin’ is that they didn’t use a drummer and the rhythmic pulse was carried by that big bass fiddle.”

The forgotten man of the Bakersfield sound (about Red Simpson)

Using bad as a bit of braggadocio and not casting any aspersions on his abilities. (about Bad Detective)

A man who never forgot where he came from; he's the real deal. (about Merle Haggard)

1991	Elvis Costello	So Like Candy
1961	Cleveland Crochet	Sugar Bee
1964	Dave Van Ronk	Candy Man

Selected BobTalk

This week we're gonna indulge our sweet tooth, go into sugar shock, look at some eye candy, meet back at the sugar shack, take some candy from a baby, give some sweets to my sweet, get sweet and low-down, and maybe even revisit the sweet bird of youth.

Listen to this and you think it's a traditional song but it's not – Elizabeth wrote it-

I don't know anything about Ray Batts except for this song...another mystery man, another great record-

You play me a Nancy Sinatra record, and I'll play you a cover of it by a band from Singapore.

Listen the drums on this record, they're quite good. You owe me five bucks, Jim. (about So Like Candy)

Boy, when was the last time a record hit the charts with accordion or a guitar like that?! Been much too long. It's not that I like old music, it's just that I'm not hearing anything like that from out in left field nowadays. (about Sugar Bee)

Here's a guy who could talk about Trotsky as well as about the Delta Blues. He could tell you about politics and literature, could identify all the French symbolist poets, and play blues and ragtime on the guitar. I could talk about Dave Van Ronk for a long time. He could totally electrify a coffee house and you could never tell when he was drawing to an inside strength. It was a privilege to know him; he was a singular individual, and hearing just one song will only give you a clue.

Heh heh heh...Welcome to the Underground Garage. I'm Little Steven.

People think of him as just a jolly fat man from New Orleans, but they don't realize what a bluesy piano player he is. Here he is with a song that'll help you get down to the real nitty-gritty. (about Fats Domino)

He's flamboyant and an artist you can't ignore. (about Guitar Slim)

Everybody always thinks of rockabilly as being a guitar-based music, but you can't imagine that record without Jerry Lee Lewis pumpin' the piano all over it. During the 60's and the 70's the guitar hero became popular, but for my money give me that pumpin' piano. The only reason the guitar became so popular is because you could wear it around your neck and stand in the middle of the stage. The poor guy playin' the piano was stuck in one spot and unless you were Little Richard or Jerry Lee Lewis you were relegated to the background. I feel we lost something when it became all guitars and no piano. Another thing that happened is that somewhere along the line people seemed to think the solo was more important than the song. On some of my favorite blues records there isn't even a solo at all. The guitar playing is mostly call and response to the vocals. If you're lucky maybe there's a one chorus guitar solo. It's not about the length of the solo, it's the feel, and a lot of those blues records had more feel than you could ever put in a twenty minute solo.

Here's another one of those records that I don't know anything about. There was more than one artist named Bobby Moore, and the records I have don't all sound like the same guy.

Before they started making operas, The Who were one of the great singles bands of the 60's.

Selected BobTalk

We're gonna take a few ticks of the clock to look at heart and hearth. We'll look at family trees, family dinners, family planning, and family jewels. There'll be Dutch uncles, grandfather clocks, kissing cousins, sons of a gun, and maybe a couple of SOBs. It's all in the family. Let's get it goin.

He was a brilliant singer and one of the best guitarists to come out of Jamaica...he was a proselytizer of the healing powers of marijuana...he was kinda like the Dr. Phil of ganja. (about Peter Tosh)

You know, people used to go into the studio when they had a song or two, when they had something to say. Nowadays, people just go into the studio 'cause they got time to kill. They sit around, they order sushi, get some Starbucks, wait for inspiration to hit, and the records sound like that. There's some records that take two years to make and you listen to 'em, and there's nothin' on 'em! This record, I guarantee you, took less than two hours to make, and wasn't even the A side. You be the judge. What would you rather listen to? A whole record about nothin' or a 45 called Little Sister?"

It's kind of ironic: we're doing our family show, and this is probably the least family-oriented song we've ever played. It is not for the pusillanimous listener, so if you're listening with young children please send them out of the room for a few minutes. Unless you're listening in the car. In that case turn the radio down for a while. (about Uncle Bud)

As good as that record sounds, you gotta see what they look like! That, my friends, is what I call showmanship. (about The Wild Tchoupitoulas)

The question I have is, 'Bring WHAT on home to grandma?

A weary skeptical record, with a darkness born of drug use. This song was all over the radio and its power could not be denied. (about Family Affair)

Selected BobTalk

I like to think of myself as a glass half full kinda guy. I don't like to think about all the people that drowned in the great flood, I like to think about all the animals Noah saved. So this week we're gonna climb aboard Noah's Ark and take a look around. It's gonna be a marvelous musical menagerie as we listen to songs about, for and by the many members of the animal kingdom. Come on! Watch where you step.

D. Bartholomew has a writing credit on this song, but I think the lyrics go back a lot further. I have a postcard with a poem on it from at least the 30's; but Dave did put a distinctive, driving guitar beat behind it. Anything that gets this type of thought across, I'm all in favor of...A tale of morality and monkey business.

It's not totally politically correct but we must remember it was a different time. (about Hold That Critter Down).

It sounds like she's singing it to the man she loves but no, she's singin' to an elephant! (about Bonnie Raitt)

Orginally the song was a satire. Queen Elizabeth had a habit of referring to her ministers with animal nicknames. She called Sir Walter Raleigh her fish. The French Ambassador Simier was her ape. And the Duc d'Alencon was her frog. So this song wasn't just about marriage in the barnyard, but it was a scathing political satire. I didn't get that the first time I heard it.

One of the few R & B records I know that has as steel guitar solo in it. (about Barnyard Boogie)

Ya know, like when you take a gal out to dinner and then at the end of the night she gives you a little peck on the cheek, and then she calls me to come over? You know what you were doing buddy? You were fattening frogs for snakes!

Don't be a jackass! We're gonna go ape. Take the bull by the horns. Play a little cat and mouse. Shoot some fish in a barrel. And go hog-wild. 'Cause I'm crazy like a fox, proud as a peacock. So unless you're ugly as a toad I'm ready to talk turkey. There'll be no weaseling out as we have as much fun as a barrel of monkeys.

One of my three favorite songs about meese. (about There's a Moose on the Loose).

Telling us to feed our heads. That's not a direct quotation from the dormouse, by the way. (about The Jefferson Airplane)

Here's another strong-willed woman, and I mean that in the best possible way... (Coyotes are) a very vocal animal... use short barks to warn of danger... whine and whimper when they are establishing bonds. They produce high pitched barks to summon puppies and sometimes, late at night when they're all relaxing, they sing Joni Mitchell songs.

I think that might have been produced by the Chinese-Jamaican producer, Leslie Kong. Chinese-Jamaican... that'd be a good kinda food. Get myself some General Tso's Jerk Chicken! (about Monkey Man)

Selected BobTalk

Here's a guy as far away from the prodigal son as you can imagine. (about Steve Earle)

He sings this song, he pounds the piano. He says he wrote it and that's good enough for me." (about Jerry Lee Lewis)

A traditional song, but in the hands of someone like Van Morrison you can see how hard it is to separate the performer from the performance. It's like a great jazz musician bringing a new interpretation to a song you've heard dozens of times.

Born with the name Mary Isabel Catherine Bernadette O'Brien – a lovely Jewish name." (about Dusty Springfield)

Let's wander over to the succulent fruit department...ya know I better get out of the peach orchard before I get myself in trouble." (about Somebody's In My Orchard)

"He had a loud guitar and a swingin' band...you hear this (trombone) solo and you can't believe that Al (Grey) played with Duke Ellington's band...it's pure gutbucket!...We don't play a lot of instrumentals all the way through, but that one was so swingin' we had to play the whole thing. (about Clarence Gatemouth Brown)

We don't often play two versions of one song, but these two are so different, and Wanda's rocks so hard, that we got to play both of them. (about Fujiyama Mama)

The sweet, gentle sounds of Mississippi John Hurt. You can hear elements of the songster tradition, the music that came before the blues, carrying elements of minstrel songs and other native American forms.

In a crypt near his birthplace, buried along with him, were his Gibson Les Paul guitar, a ring he wore every day that was given to him by Prince Asfaw Wossen of Ethiopia, a marijuana bud, a soccer ball, and a bible. His needs were simple." (about Bob Marley)

Known as Betty Bebob, but she hated that name. She thought that bebop was limited and she wanted to do more, and she did. (about Betty Carter)

It's one thing to make an entrance, it's another thing entirely to get out alive. So for the next hour we'll be checking all the exits, finding our way outta here...and this show might run a little long this week, but that's OK. What are they gonna do, fire me?

Great loose sounding record. Really sounds like he's in it. You know what drives me crazy? I see all these pictures of rock bands in the studio, and they're very careful to make sure you can see the bottle of whiskey they have with them. They want you to know they're on the edge. You listen to their records, they don't sound like that. What's up with that? This guy, Peppermint Harris, probably just had a couple nips before he went into the studio and he sounds lose as a goose.

And it has been good to know you this year and here we are at the end of another season. May you have warm words on a cool evening, a full moon of a dark night, and a smooth road all the way to your door. I'm going to head on down to Elmo's Lounge. We're having our wrap party there. Sampson's Diner is catering. If you happen to be driving by and the light is still on, come in and have a drink. It'd be good to see ya. In the mean time, see ya later, so long, and don't ever forget, every goodbye is the birth of a memory.

BobTalk

Welcome to Theme Time Radio Hour. Today we're going to take a musical look at one of my favorite pastimes. It's an act of intimacy, the thing that Mae West called a man's signature. And I'm guessing she knows what she was talking about.

You can call it a lip lock, or, as our friends across the pond call it, "snogging." I call it good old-fashioned kissing. You can kiss up, kiss off, kiss the Blarney Stone, or kiss my ass. So, for the next hour, we're going to play a little musical game of "spin the bottle." This is your kissing bandit welcoming you to the osculatory edition of Theme Time Radio Hour.

Here's a little lady from Chicago way, though she was actually born in Mississippi. She made her name in Chicago, recording for local labels like Vee-Jay, Cobra, and Wonderful. Wasn't till she went to Vee-Jay that she made her mark. Here's Betty Everett and the Shoop Shoop Song, "It's in His Kiss."

If it's in his kiss, perhaps it's mononucleosis, commonly known as the "kissing disease." It's a viral infection, most often the Epstein-Barr virus. It's carried in saliva and is usually spread by kissing. But you can get it from sneezes and coughs also. Personally, I'd prefer to get it from kissing.

Doctor Joyce Brothers reports that before marriage the average American woman has kissed 79 men, which means that 79 men have kissed Doctor Joyce Brothers.

Blackie Crawford had a band called the Western Cherokees. His singer in that band became much more famous. His name was Lefty Frizzell and he's a big favorite here around the Abernathy Building. Blackie and Lefty wrote this song together and it spent 12 weeks at #1 on the country charts. Here's the always punctual Lefty Frizzell, "Always Late with Your Kisses."

There's being late with your kisses and there's even the worse experience of being left at the altar. That's what happened to Nicole Contos. In 1997 she was due to marry a shipping broker by the name of Tasos Michael. She was in a packed church in Manhattan and he left her. He didn't even show up. But she went on with the wedding by herself. The wedding cost $65,000 and she wasn't going to waste it. Her friends rallied around her, enjoyed the $175-a-plate dinner and afterwards cheered her on when she danced to the disco hit, "I Will Survive." Nicole Contos, a resilient woman.

This is Theme Time Radio Hour. We're talking about kissing, which means we're centering on cupidity and not stupidity. Lucinda Williams wrote a song all about passionate kisses. Lucinda's father was a poet, and a literature professor, and they traveled extensively when she was a child through Mexico and Chile as well as the American South. All that travel was good for her, 'cause she soaked up a lot of culture. A lot of people know this song because it was a big hit for Mary Chapin Carpenter. A #5 smash. It got Lucinda her first of three Grammy awards. So, let's listen to Lucinda's version from her 1988 album, here's "Passionate Kisses."

That was Lucinda Williams, "Passionate Kisses" here on Theme Time Radio Hour, where we're reminding you that a one-minute kiss burns about 26 calories. Deep, passionate kissing burns up to 600 calories per hour. If anyone listening needs a workout, I'm available.

Billy Boy Arnold was born in 1935 in Chicago, Illinois. And like Betty Everett, he recorded for the Vee-Jay record label. But he had his start playing harmonica with Bo Diddley. After a couple of records, though, he struck out on his own. You probably know his song, "I Wish You Would." But this one is all about kissing at a particular time. Here's Billy Boy Arnold, "Kissing at Midnight." [BBC version]

If you're kissing at midnight, better be careful and not do it where the blue laws are in effect. You can find blue laws in the United States and Canada and they're meant to protect the Sabbath as a sacred day. These laws would prohibit breaches in family discipline, public drunkenness, public displays of affection and excesses in dress. They're called "blue laws" because of the blue paper they were originally printed on.

Let's move from blue laws to a purple artist, Minneapolis native, Prince, or as I call him, "The Artist formerly known as the Artist formerly known as Prince."

Here's a song of his that was recorded by Tom Jones, The Art of Noise, and a whole bunch of other people. But I've always liked the original. It's a funk record that doesn't have any bass on it. Here's Prince. [BBC version]

That was Prince, and "Kiss." I always thought KISS should have recorded a song called, "Prince." I'll have to call Gene Simmons and ask him about that.

One place a lot of people kiss is under the mistletoe. Well, it's an interesting legend. According to Scandinavian myth, the Norse god Baldur was the best loved of all the gods. Frigga was his mother, the goddess of love and beauty. She wanted to make sure no harm would ever come to her beloved son. She went through the entire world getting promises from everything that sprang from the four elements that they would not harm her beloved Baldur.

The evil trickster Loki was able to find the one thing that could harm Baldur, and that was mistletoe. He made an arrow from the wood of the mistletoe. To be even crueler, he took the arrow to Baldur's blind brother Hodor. Loki guided Hodor's hand and shot the arrow at Baldur's heart. He fell dead, and Frigga's tears changed the red mistletoe berries to white. But the gods gave mercy on Frigga and Baldur was restored to life. Frigga was so grateful that she showed no hatred for the offending mistletoe plant, making it a symbol of love and promising to bestow a kiss upon anyone who passed beneath it. [BBC version]

I'm sure some of those kisses happened in the dark.] Here's Memphis Minnie, one of the great guitarist and singers, "Kissing in the Dark" . [BBC version]

That was Memphis Minnie, "Kissing in the Dark," written by her husband at the time, Ernest Lawlars, who was known as "Little Son Joe."

The average person spends 336 hours of their life kissing. It doesn't seem like enough.

Another popular "Kiss" was made by Milton Hershey, a candy maker in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. In 1894 he started the Hershey Company, and they produce chocolates to this day. In 1907 they produced a flat-bottomed, cone-shaped candy. One kind of kiss you definitely want more of is a French Kiss. A lot of people think that the French Kiss originated in France. Actually, the term became slang in 1923 as a slur to the French. People thought that the French were overly infatuated with sexual matters as anyone who knows the complete version of the poem that begins.... "The French, they are a funny race"... can tell you. [kiss sound] Somehow I wish I didn't know that.

In France, there's no such thing as a "French Kiss." They probably just call it a "kiss," just like they call French Fries "fries." In French what it's called "embrasser avec la langue," which means literally, "to kiss the tongue." Or as some prefer to say, "rouler un pelle," which means, "to roll the blade."

Here's a song out of New Orleans, kind of a local hit, but didn't make a lot of noise anywhere else. I always enjoyed it though, and I thought this would be an opportunity to share it with you. It's by a singer named Danny White, this is the closest he ever had to a hit, and it was in 1963. "Kiss Tomorrow Goodbye."

[BBC version]The closest thing he had to another hit was the next year with a cover version of Earl King's ballad, "Loan Me a Handkerchief," an admonitory song to say the least.]

Let's continue our kissing show with a guy who didn't have a hit, but he had the last word on a hit. I'll explain it after I play the song. Here's Hueelyn Duvall, "Pucker Paint." [BBC version]

He never had a hit of his own, but back in 1958 he was asked to sit in on a recording session. He didn't play guitar on that record, but he added some "oohs" and "aahs" to the A-side, a song called "Train to Nowhere". The B-side was an instrumental, and he didn't play on it at all. However, he did yell the title out on the end, and sometime every day you can hear Hueelyn Duvall yell out "Tequila" at the end of the Champs record." [BBC version].

Connie Francis was a very popular artist who had a very sad life. [BBC version] But that's not how I choose to remember her. Let's remember Connie Francis in happier times with a light-hearted look at marital infidelity. Here she is: "Lipstick on Your Collar."

Her father tried to get her to make a living playing and teaching the accordion. She was on a competition at age 9 on Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts." Even then, Arthur Godfrey could tell how beautiful her voice was and convinced her to give up the accordion. She recorded a series of singles that went nowhere. She was on her way to a pre-med scholarship at New York University. But first, one last recording session, which included a song that she hated, but that her father wanted her to record. She sang it quickly, only doing one take. America fell in love with it, and "Who's Sorry Now" was the first of a long string of hits. She knew a lot of different languages, and recorded her songs in Italian, Hebrew, Spanish, French, German, and Japanese. She starred in the movies in "Where the Boys Are," "Looking for Love," and "When the Boys Meet the Girls."

She retired for awhile, but in 1974 her third husband convinced her to go back on the stage. She had only done four performances when she checked into a motel on Long Island. The motel lock was faulty, and she was raped. Her marriage fell apart. Shortly thereafter she was bouncing back, but in 1981 her brother was brutally murdered. It was only during therapy for all these events that she discovered that she was maniac-depressive and had been addicted to pills for maybe as long as 25 years.

She sued the hotel she got raped in for negligence and received 2.5 million dollars, which at the time was the largest personal injury settlement in history. It doesn't seem enough for the amount of pain she went through. But that's not how I choose to remember her. Let's remember Connie Francis in happier times with a light-hearted look at marital infidelity. Here she is: "Lipstick on Your Collar."

That was Connie Francis with a story of trouble told in color on the collar of your shirt.

You know how people sign letters with "X"s, that mean little kisses? Well, here's where that came from. Hundreds of years ago when clergy and priests wrote letters they would sign their name, and then they would add a cross. That's because a cross has many interpretations. One of the primary meanings is "love." So it was nice to sign off a letter with that. 'Bout three hundred years after that, people who were writing love letters started adopting the cross symbol as a shorthand for "love." But they rotated it 'bout 45 degrees, so when you take a cross and turn it 45 degrees you get an "X" and they say this rotation was to imitate the way you turn your head when giving a kiss. So the "X" at the end of a letter became the sign of a kiss.

[Radio Eins version] Now, it seems like I know a lot about kissing.] Here's Don and Phil with a song written by Don. It's from 1959 on the Cadence record label, and if you have to ask, "Don and Phil who?" you're not a regular listener of this show. Here are the Everly Brothers, "Til I Kissed You."

The tradition of lifting the veil and kissing the bride is a combination of two old customs. Lifting the veil was a part of the ancient wedding ritual. See, marriages used to be arranged by family members. The newlyweds quite often had never met. These arranged marriages had large sums of money riding on them, and sometimes there was the fear that if the groom didn't like the bride's looks he might refuse to marry her and her family would lose a great dowry. This is why the father of the bride gave the broad away at the wedding ceremony, only after they lifted her veil would he see her face for the first time.

In ancient Rome, couples became betrothed by kissing passionately in front of a group of people and that's why we have kissing at the end of the modern wedding ceremony.

You're listening to Theme Time Radio Hour, your home for themes, dreams, and smooching schemes. So pucker up and listen.

If you got to kiss, people do it different ways in different places. For example, in the Middle East, cheek kissing between a male and female is usually considered inappropriate, unless it's within the same family. Some cultures in the Himalayas don't kiss at all. They know that saliva has a lot of bacteria and I guess they're afraid of mono. Some cultures in Africa don't kiss on the mouth because they consider it a portal to the soul. So someone that kisses you could take your soul.

And in the South Pacific's Trobriand Islands kissing is highly erotic and very aggressive. It begins with gentle hugging and kissing, then progresses until you're biting each other's lips and bleeding commences. It concludes with biting off each other's eyelash tips.

I know it sounds weird, but it's pretty good! Trust me.

Some kisses can get you into trouble, but just as easily you can use them to make up. Here are The Falcons, with a very young Wilson Pickett. Right after he recorded this record with the Falcons, he went off on a solo career. From 1963, on the Atlantic label, "Let's Kiss and Make Up," The Falcons.

That was The Falcons, here on Theme Time Radio Hour, "Let's Kiss and Make Up," not to be confused with KISS and makeup.

A second email, I got one here, that's perfect for today's show. Comes to us from Lawrence P. Boar from Sheepshead Bay, Long Island. Lawrence writes,

"Dear Theme Time Gang. I heard through the grapevine that you're doing a show about kissing. I could sure use your help. My girlfriend says I'm a bad kisser. We get along great, but I'm afraid this one problem is going to ruin the whole thing. Please help! Anxious in Sheepshead Bay, Long Island, Lawrence P. More."

Well, Lawrence, kissing is an important part of a relationship, and it's one of those things that you have to be relaxed to do. So the fact that you're getting anxious about it isn't helping you one bit. However, I can give you a few tips. Armed with this knowledge, you'll feel a little more confident and be able to set things right. First of all, make sure your lips are moist. Run your tongue over your lips once before you kiss her. No one likes to kiss sandpaper. Stand close to your partner, you don't want her to have her reach too far. Tilt your head slightly to one side. Close your eyes just before your lips meet. Just close them! Some people like to leave their eyes open during a kiss, but until you understand your partner's preference, better to play it safe and close your eyes.

Open your lips slightly, not like you're going to swallow her whole head, just a little bit and hold your breath, breathe through your nose. Press your partner's lips gently, move your lips in a slow, circular motion. Be gentle but firm. And finally, and I can't stress this enough, have a pocketful of mints. There's no underestimating the attractiveness of good breath.

Good luck and happy kissing. I hope it won't be until long that your hear your girl say, "Baby, let me kiss you just one more time."

Hey, that sounds like a song cue! Why, golly, it is. Here's Roy Head and The Traits.

That was Roy Head and The Traits and "Baby Let Me Kiss You Just One More Time." Everybody talks about how great cow bells sound on records, but they forget how good a tambourine can sound. That record will remind you. Roy was only 16 years old when he recorded that. It was his first record and was in the Top Ten locally, and by "locally" I mean Three Rivers, Texas, which is where Roy is from.

You all know Roy from his big hit "Treat Her Right," and he's still out there performing. I saw him two years ago at the Ponderosa Stomp and they tore the place up.

We're getting up near the end of the show, and almost time for a kiss goodnight.

Well, we've got time for a couple more songs. Here's a song written by a guy whose got the best hair in show business. If you don't believe me, Google him right now. The writer's name was Wayne Cochran. We'll tell you about him on the other side of the song. But first I want to tell you about the guy who sang it.

J. Frank Wilson had only one hit. He was the vocalist with a band called "The Cavaliers," who played around local Texas clubs. This record came out and became a huge hit. Unfortunately J. Frank Wilson didn't know how to deal with it. He thought he was a superstar. He filled himself up with sex and booze and stayed up night and day. It was so bad that the band left him behind after just a few shows. He never had another hit. He died before his 50th birthday, an alcoholic, alone in a nursing home.

The song, however, had a longer life. Pearl Jam recorded it in 1999, and it became their biggest chart hit, going all the way up to #2. One of the saddest songs in pop history.

That was J. Frank Wilson, "Last Kiss," written by the man with the platinum pompadour, Wayne Cochran.

Let me tell you how the song was written. On December 22nd, 1962 16-year-old Janet Clark was out on a date. She was with a group of friends in a Chevrolet on Highway 341. The car collided with a trailer truck. Janet, the driver, and another teenager were killed. Two other kids in the car had serious injuries. It was a terribly gory accident. So bad, in fact, that a local gas station attendant who helped in recovery of the bodies did not recognize his own daughter. Fifteen miles away, Wayne Cochran was paying $20 a month rent for an old shack. He saw many accidents on that stretch of highway, so many that he started writing a song about them. But he could never finish it. The death of Janet Clark was a horrible inspiration for him to finish that song. He called it "Last Kiss."

Wayne went on to have a career as a dynamic rhythm and blues performer, but eventually he left it all behind to join the clergy, preaching in Miami.

Well, we can't end the show with such a sad kiss, so let's listen to one of the masters, the fountainhead from which all music flows. Louie Armstrong and a song that was a signature piece of his live performances in the later period of his life. This is a version he recorded in 1951 with "A Kiss to Build a Dream On."

That was Louie Armstrong, from the movie, "The Strip," "A Kiss to Build a Dream On." If that song sounds familiar, maybe you recognize it from the movie "Sleepless in Seattle."

Before we go, I want to share some words with you written by Robert Burns. It's called "[Ode] to a Kiss"

*Humid seal of soft affections,
Tend'rest pledge of future bliss,
Dearest tie of young connections,
Love's first snow-drop, virgin kiss.*

*Speaking silence, dumb confession,
Passion's birth, and infants' play,
Dove-like fondness, chaste concession,
Glowing dawn of brighter day.*

*Sorrowing joy, adieu's last action,
Ling'ring lips, -- no more to join!
What words can ever speak affection
Thrilling and sincere as thine!*

Robert Burns, kissable poet.

Thanks for listening and I'm going to leave you with the words of Albert Einstein. Albert said, "Any man who can drive safely while kissing a pretty girl is simply not giving the kiss the attention it deserves." I agree with him totally. [Radio Eins version: We'll see you next week.] Go kiss someone you love.

The session date here is not the original broadcast date.

"A waitress returns home, happy to take her shoes off." Ellen Barkin, Theme Time's Lady in Red, says this line in another TTRH intro, episode 40, "Laughter." It appears that the Lady in Red's intros are compilations, as there are several examples during the show's run of one of her lines being re-used. While the Lady in Red's intros sometimes had something to do with the show's theme, there are many intros that don't, and even one or two shows where there's no intro at all.

Comment by Fred Bals:

The 101st episode of Theme Time Radio Hour, "Kiss" also known as "The Kiss Show" and "Kissing," was originally released on February 11, 2015 by Berlin radio station Radio Eins as a special episode of its "Friendly Takeover" series. Like TTRH, the "Friendly Takeover" show features musicians acting as deejay and playing cuts that they've selected.

Advertised by Radio Eins as previously "unknown" and "never broadcasted," "Kiss" seems to have been recorded during TTRH's third season, which ran from late 2008 to April 2009. Why "Kiss" never aired until six or seven years later is unknown. Perhaps the TTRH team was unhappy with the sound quality. Much of Our Host's commentary sounds as if it was recorded in a cavern, especially in the early half of the show. Maybe the grim stories about Connie Francis and J. Frank Wilson gave the producers second thoughts about airing a dark show with the light-hearted theme of "Kiss."

If either of those are right, it leaves open the question as to why the producers didn't go back and re-record or re-edit "Kiss" and then release it.

So, maybe the producers recorded back-up episodes in case of emergency and the need to replace a scheduled show? Maybe Season 3 was originally going to run longer than the 25 episodes that were aired? Maybe they were planning a fourth season?

We'll probably never know.

How the show ended up with Radio Eins in 2015 is another question. Possibly "Friendly Takeover" solicited Mr. D.'s office to have him do a show a la the old TTRH and in due course the answer came back, "No, but we do have this unaired episode of the original TTRH that you can use. Interested?"

Shortly after Radio Eins aired "Kiss" the show was broadcast on Sirius XM and later on the BBC, which leads into the curious problem of the different "Kisses."

There are at least two versions of "Kiss" online: the Radio Eins "original," and a version broadcast by the BBC. The most glaring differences are that the Radio Eins version drops a full segment – Billy Boy Arnold and "Kissing at Midnight" – while the BBC version drastically edits Our Host's commentary on Connie Francis and drops the closing credits. There are several other differences between the two which I note in the transcription.

Both versions were probably edited for time reasons. "Friendly Takeover" is normally a 55-minute show, and the producers needed to make cuts to fit the show within the time they had. The BBC "Kiss" episode includes a news segment, as well as an ID and promo, all of which eat into the show's allotted time.

The BBC editor appears to have been more of a fan of TTRH than his Radio Eins counterpart, making the Solomonic choice to keep "Kissing at Midnight" while losing most of the overly long and very depressing Connie Francis commentary as well as editing out Our Host's "see you next week." Sadly, there has been no "next week," at least not yet.

Of the two, the BBC version is probably the "better" version, including intros and outros for Prince's "Kiss" and Huelyn Duvall's "Pucker Paint" as well as a segment on mistletoe missing in the Radio Eins version. Yet, completists will want both, of course, if for no other reason than for Our Host's full commentary on Connie Francis, as bleak as it is.
