1 INTRODUCTION

Bob Dylan was back on the road and also back on the streets. He returned to New York City in the summer and started hanging out in the Village. He met Jacques Levy and they started writing a number of songs that were later to become Desire, one of Dylan’s most commercially successful albums. Late in the summer the idea of a new tour took form. This turned out to be something completely different compared to the last year’s comeback tour with The Band. This was to be a low-key tour with a number of friends like Bob Neuwirth, Roger McGuinn, Allen Ginsberg, Ramblin’ Jack Elliott and Joan Baez. He called it the Rolling Thunder Revue.

5 THE ROLLING THUNDER REVUE

5.1 Introduction

The Rolling Thunder Revue was conceived by Bob Dylan as a traveling show that was to be on “a forever tour” appearing in small venues, coffee houses even, without much advertising or marketing hullabaloo. The Revue was to consist of a variable number of performers backed by a core band. If the Revue passed through town and a local artist felt like joining he was always welcome. Well, that was the concept anyway. And it started out pretty much that way, but during the last part of November the venues got bigger, the press coverage got more intense.

The first Rolling Thunder Revue started in Plymouth, Massachusetts and ended with the first of two benefit concerts in Madison Square Garden in New York City, 8 December. There was a second benefit concert in Houston in January. The second and last part of The Rolling Thunder Revue took place in April and May 1976.

During the first Rolling Thunder Revue Bob Dylan filmed his famous 4-hour movie Renaldo And Clara. Please refer to chapter 7 for details. All shows were taped by the Dylan crew and some were filmed. A lot of rehearsals and informal sessions etc were also filmed and later included in Renaldo & Clara.

The reporter Larry Sloman has in his book On The Road With Bob Dylan. Rolling With The Thunder a very candid and entertaining recollection of what it was like to be on tour with The Rolling Thunder Revue. An index to this invaluable book can be found in chapter 6

5.2 The show

A concert by the Rolling Thunder Revue consisted of two sets.

- Set 1     Circa 15 songs by the group (Guam)
           5-6 songs by Bob Dylan backed by Guam
- Set 2     5 songs acoustically by Bob Dylan and Joan Baez backed by Guam
           Circa 10 songs by Joan Baez and Roger McGuinn backed by Guam
           1-3 songs by Bob Dylan solo
           5-6 songs by Bob Dylan backed by Guam

There were no encores!

5.3 The musicians

The band called Guam consisted of:

Steven Soles (guitar),	Bob Neuwirth (guitar),

7 RENALDO AND CLARA

This film was shot during the first Rolling Thunder Revue tour. Sam Shepard was hired as script writer, but produced no script, instead the "diary" Rolling Thunder Logbook, see chapter 10 SUGGESTED READINGS. Dylan and Howard Alk spent large part of 1977 editing the film and it was first released 25 January 1978.

Renaldo & Clara contains some forty-five minutes of very good live footage as well as a "background music" taken from the October rehearsals.

Notes:

1. No Dylan version of this song is in circulation.
2. An early version was played at the Other End, 3 July 1975.
3. Played during the tours in 1975, 1976 and 1978, and occasionally during the Never-Ending Tour.
4. Mentioned in some of the press reviews from the last show in 1976 in Salt Lake City, but might be mistaken for Romance In Durango.
5. Sung by Rob Stoner in Renaldo & Clara. Covered by Joe Cocker on his album 'Stingray' (A&M).
6. Covered by Roger McGuinn on his album 'Thunderbyrd' (Columbia).
7. Played only during the first Rolling Thunder Revue. Hurricane remains to this day one of the most requested songs at concerts, but I guess we are as likely to hear it as we are to hear Sara again.
8. Played during the Rolling Thunder Revue in 1975 and 1976.
9. This song didn't made its live debut until 1987 when The Grateful Dead persuaded Dylan to take it up. Played also during the Temple of Flames tour later same year in Europe.
10. A song mentioned by Sloman [1], as being recorded at the 'Sara-session' in July, but it is probably a work name for Abandoned Love.
11. No cover known, but lyrics published in Lyrics..
12. Played only during the second Rolling Thunder Revue in 1976.
13. Played during the Rolling Thunder Revue in 1975 and 1976. and with new startling arrangement in 1978.
14. One live performance from New Orleans 3 May 1976 has survived.
15. Recorded with Eric Clapton 1976 and released on his album 'No Reason To Cry', September 1976.
16. Title present on the studio sheets from 31 July, but without CO-number.
